COLLABORATION HUB ON EATP WEBSITE

The Department understands that some parties may wish to participate in the EATP program but have difficulty identifying suitable partners, willing stakeholder communities (including remote or regional Indigenous communities), project proponents, etc.

To assist those looking for potential partners, we have included a “collaboration hub” on our EATP program web page where interested parties can register their interest and provide contact details. Parties looking to identify potential partners /communities might wish to check the collaboration hub register for potential candidates. Parties, communities and/or project proponents wishing to register their interest are invited to submit contact details and the nature of the partnership/collaboration sought by email to eatp@infrastructure.gov.au, for publication in the collaboration hub on our website, to provide an opportunity for interested parties to make contact directly should they wish to find potential partners or collaborate on project proposals. The Collaboration Hub Register can be accessed here.

Please note:

- the Register has recently been established and may take some time to attract interested parties;
- the Department will not be vetting the parties on the Register list and inclusion on this list does not represent endorsement by the Department. Parties seeking to make contact are expected to undertake their own checks/due diligence.
