

Submission: 124

Anonymous

I do not support a regulated, compulsory approach to ADSB for recreational aviation within Australia. I fly several antique aircraft, one without an electrical system, so would be excessively costly to fit any mandatory electrical equipment, due to need to fit power generation systems on aircraft, as to rely on battery power, would undermine the functionality of a mandatory system.

I fly for enjoyment and custodianship of older aircraft and the expected costs of ADSB fitment would make it uneconomical to continue with my interests in aviation.