Hi

Thank you for the opportunity to make a submission.

We live in [REDACTED] and as I type this a huge aircraft is going overhead (20:25pm on a Thursday night in March with a 6kph westerly), Here comes another one - it is 20:16pm. My husband has just turned the tv up to hear the golf doco he is watching.

Most times we have subtitles on the tv as the a/c noise is so intrusive.

You should be operating SODOROPS Mode 1 as it is Evening Mode (8pm to 10pm) Visual conditions and downwind up to 5kts) – ‘passive’ i.e. at Airservices Australia's discretion to be used if air traffic is low for an extended period You are not. Why?

We live in a 1970, building on the top floor with a lovely balcony. We bought here in 2014. We used to enjoy watching the a/c go over the Gateway Bridge. I was a Flight Attendant for both Ansett & QF for 17 years. In Cairns we lived in [REDACTED] near the airport so we are no strangers to a/c noise, arrivals, departures, cross winds, noise abatement procedures. It was nothing compared to the abortion that was implemented at Brisbane.

What was sold to us residents in [REDACTED] in the original flight path mapping (as part of the stakeholder consultation documentation) depicted we would be on the edge of a maximum 70db noise area.

This is absolute bollocks. I invite you to install a noise measuring. Sorry let me pause at 8:32 as another 737 passes over my house.

It is 8:36 and here is another loud intrusive a/c unnecessarily interrupts our lives.

You have so many options to embrace best international practice. We had a Fiji Airlines Captain here for dinner last week who told us he is astounded at the mismanagement of air space over Bne. There is so much more you bureaucrats could do with all the safety measures and technology available in the world today to better manage this stuff up.

As a taxpayer we demand you listen to us and take into account the devastating toll this aircraft noise has on our lives and mental wellbeing. Must go it's 8:42 and another a/c passes over.

Please advise this submission has been received and will be included.

Kind regards
Jane Alcorn
