Short comment

Trains, particularly inter-city trains should have toilets. E.g. trains from Sydney to Newcastle, if you are travelling from South Western Sydney to the Central Coast, it is a travel time of around 3 and a half hours with no access to toilet facilities on the train. There also needs to be support staff on the train. If the govt can afford to pay police and state rail security staff to check passengers have paid their fares, 3 time within half an hour it can afford staff to liaise with public on issues of safety. In short stop treating the public like we are a Third World population. Treat people with respect. Our taxes are for our use only, not to prop up private enterprise. For elderly & visually impaired people getting on and off trains is difficult, every station seems to be a different height & distance from the train. Put money into modernizing rail travel, we need to see, on a daily basis, that our fares & taxes are being spent on our rail system. It should be safe, clean, COMFORTABLE and welcoming.
