Short comment

I agree with most of the 22 key proposals listed in the report dome by the Social Research Centre and Mettlesome; except for two:

1. We do NOT need a new PG13 rating. M is fine as is. It would just make things even more confusing.
Stuff just needs to be classified correctly.
(Like I'm surprised Thunderbolts got a PG for its themes and violence, and the recent Bille Eilish: Hit Me Hard And Soft concert film snuck by with a PG despite a few F-words)
2. MA15+ needs to stay at 15. Raising it to 16 is stupid and would further restrict the target audience films in that catagory are targeted at (like Deadpool or It) and it barely make a difference in impact received by the recipients, and would just make the gap between it and M even bigger.
