Short comment

Years ago before mobile phones this would never have been a problem. But with the world now requiring connectivity it becomes a necessity. The phone companies have made a rod for their backs.can't just supply connectivity for part of population when all being charged for a service. It becomes mandatory in my opinion for service to be widespread and if not able to cover 100% then and automatic emergency service should override in the limited service areas if all fails for safety of the population
