Short comment

I strongly support the UOMO. Too many places (often but not always) in rural Australia do not have access to reliable mobile telephony services. For example, I live in Murrumbateman NSW which is 25Km from Canberra, and mobiles are very unreliable at my house. This situation is both inconvenient and dangerous - so many services these days need to be accessed through mobile phones and this is unachievable in my house. I have recently travelled to African developing countries and note that their mobile services are better than those that we have in many places here - not good enough!
