Short comment

My mobile phone access has deteriorated since the 3G network was switched off, to the extent that I have to leave the property to get reception. My landline is currently not working and it has gone off once or twice a year in the recent past. I suspect Telstra would like me to give up on the landline because it crosses a flood-prone river and has cost them a considerable amount of money to repair the line after floods and the January 2020 fire.

I believe that some kind of phone access should be available to all those willing to pay a reasonable price for service. I am a RFS volunteer but I only get notifications on "RFS Active" when I drive out and get mobile reception.
