

My views about the Public Transport

I travel on trains and taxis.

Taxi Vouchers, a person who is vision impaired/blind, we are unable to see what is filled into the vouchers, and we have to trust that the driver puts the correct information in. This electronic age why can't we be issued with a card and be direct debited.

Trains, it came to my notice on one of the newer city train while traveling on the City Circle there was a Guard Announcement saying the next station but no name of the station was on the sign, having the name of the station is important for people who have a hearing disability or a person who has very limited understanding of English.

The Blue Mountain Line: Seats very uncomfortable, Grubby Carriages, no room for luggage and prams. Only some trains have wheelchair access, needs to have an accessible carriage on every train, there are some disability accessible railway stations in the Blue Mountains. This would be a problem on all this type of trains, they are so old and should be updated.
