

Gentlemen:

The Australian Government International Broadcast Services have permitted until the Short Wave Stations' shut-down the following of the country's daily occurrences in sports, finance and politics. It has been also an instrument favoring good will between nations.

SWLing (short wave listening) is a nice rewarding hobby and the clear and strong signal from the Australian radio heard in South America has permitted the happy testing of home-made receivers and other apparatuses.

It is our best hope that the Australian Government will revoke its decision of silencing SW radio transmissions, permitting thousands of listeners worldwide continue enjoying the Australian international broadcasts.

Very best regards from Lima – Peru.

Yours,
