

confirmation whether or not your submission can be made public—published: Yes, that's fine if without the contact details of course.

Submission points:

- I do not want the Australian government controlling internet information/material or wasting money in an effort to do so.
- Where ever possible the internet should be a place largely free of government interference.
- Governments are always ineffective and wasteful in their efforts to control or make “safe” the internet.
- The extra impost upon internet business is not warranted. They remove content at good speed considering their audience size.
- Personal responsibility and choice is what is required to view or not view material that someone may find harmful.
- I reject any attempt at censorship. People should be able to freely make their views and, where others find it to be “unacceptable,” they have equal opportunity to make their counterpoints in response.
- “eSafety Commissioner” is wasted money/position.
- This issue should be very far down the list of priorities for government attention. Federal government ICAC should be way above this.

I have not seen this call for submissions advertised previously to 16/02/20 and find this unacceptable.

I find it unacceptable that it has been made more difficult to submit views, requiring an offline document to be created, saved, uploaded etc.

I am very dubious and disturbed by all of this and suspect that submissions will be very skewed rather than balanced.

Trust in government is at an all-time low.
